

Susan Court (00:00):

Well, yes, there are sexual health behavior questions, but if you look at the trend analysis over the three past 30 years, they've stayed constant.

(00:09):

But the push back they says is, "Well, if you talk to our kids about sexual health, they're just gonna go out and do it." And my response was, "I took home in high school, and I still don't cook." It f- alleviated a lot of fears. And, yes, I used that jokingly kind of in a manner, but I also mean it. Uh, you know, there's research that proves just talking about a topic is not going to incite the kids to go and do it. Talking about suicide ideation is not going to make kids go out and become suicidal.